DR. CLINE, CIA INTELLIGENCE CHIEF, LEAVES
FOR U.S.

CPYRGHT

Taipei, May 31 (CNA): Dr. Ray S. Cline, intelligence chief of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, left here for the U.S. with his family yesterday.

Dr. Cline was former director of U.S. Naval Auxiliary Communications Center in Taipei. He came here on May 27 to get his family who was left behind when he left here last month after he was appointed to the CIA post.

He told the press that he came here for the exclusive purpose of bringing his wife and daughter home, explaining that he had to leave his wife and daughter here last month because his daughter was then still attending the Taipei American School.
